Swiss Society for Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology – Benefits for Young Researcher

The SGA has over 200 members and offers a platform for exchange and dialogue between scientists, administrators and policymakers. The SGA specifically supports young scientists working in the fields of agricultural economics and rural sociology at a Swiss Research institution. Next to organizing annual SGA conferences, regular webinars and the annual Agroconet colloquium as well as facilitating the platform for rural sociology, the SGA offers three measures directly targeted at young scientists.

- 1) SGA Young Scientists Award: The SGA honors the special achievements of young scientists who have written an outstanding master's or bachelor's thesis on a subject of interest to the Society with the SGA Young Scientists Award. The award contains prize money and free membership in the SGA and is also intended to provide recipients with the opportunity to present their work at the SGA's annual conference. <https://www.sse-sga.ch/en/sse-sga/sse-sga/nachwuchsfoerderung/sga-young-scientists-award>
- 2) SGA Travel Grants: The SGA supports the active participation of young scientists working at Swiss institutions in attending conferences, meetings and seminars in the subject area covered by the SGA. Travel grants of up to 500 CHF are awarded. <https://www.sse-sga.ch/en/sse-sga/sse-sga/nachwuchsfoerderung/sga-travel-grants>
- 3) Swiss PhD Seminar in Agricultural Economics: The SGA supports the PhD Seminar in Agricultural Economics as part of its activities to promote young scientists. The aims of the annual one-day event are: to support the education of Agricultural Economics PhD students in Switzerland; to provide feedback on PhD students' papers/draft papers /ideas; to facilitate exchange between and create a network for PhD students; and to offer information targeted at PhD students. <https://www.sse-sga.ch/en/sse-sga/sse-sga/nachwuchsfoerderung/phd-seminar>
